

During my senior year of high school, I wrote ZERO.

ZERO, in many ways, was the start of it all. Although it is very dear to me, I denied ZERO for a very long time. I confess “slipping through the system” with my 1.89 grade point average upon high school graduation. Yet, ZERO hinted at my future as a scholar and writer. In fact, the final paragraph of “Fear of Failure” depicts the plight of John D. Wicinas since I wrote it.

Enjoy. Have a good read. Keep in mind “Fear of Failure” is a record of adolescence. It is not fiction.

Best,

John
